

Agewell Computer Club, January 2012.

Free computer and Internet classes for Hackney residents aged 50 to 65.

The Agewell Computer Club offers free computer and Internet classes to Hackney mid-lifers (Hackney residents aged 50 to 65) – for absolute beginners, relative beginners, and more advanced workshops for people who have got past the beginner stage.

When we do it.

Our weekly sessions are every Monday and Tuesday afternoon. We hope you will want to come on both days.

Monday, 2 to 5 pm.

Agewell Social Network.

Our Monday Agewell Social Network is the best way to start with us – especially if you are a beginner. We think learning about the Internet should always be fun – so we don't do anything that is boring or difficult. Join us now to start learning about email, the World Wide Web, and everything that has digital in its name.

Tuesday, 2 to 5 pm.

Agewell Community Computing.

Our Tuesday afternoon sessions are for people who are a bit more confident or experienced – or who just can't get enough of the Internet. We have regular workshops and short courses on topics requested by our members – for example – email, digital pictures, online music, Skype, buying a computer, online news, information about health and local issues.

How to join in.

If you are a Hackney mid-lifer (a Hackney resident aged 50 to 65), and you haven't been to Agewell Computer Club before – just come along at 2 pm any Monday afternoon. If Monday is awkward, come on Tuesday at 2 pm instead.

By the way – partners and carers are always very welcome, so please bring them with you. They don't have to be Hackney mid-lifers too.

More about the Agewell Computer Club.

The Agewell Computer Club is just one service amongst many others provided by Agewell in Hackney – a hugely successful local project managed by Age UK Hackney, and funded by the City & Hackney Primary Care Trust.

You can think of the Agewell Computer Club as a free Internet café – but it's not just about learning computer skills. We have a constantly varying program, usually centred around the Internet – and anything else which has 'digital' in its name. Our aim is to show you how you can use this new technology to improve the life you already have – getting more involved in the community, being useful as a volunteer, helping you to find employment, have more frequent contact with your friends and family.

You don't need a computer at home. And if you have a computer, you don't need an Internet connection. We provide all of that, plus training and the support you need afterwards.

It's easy to join us. Just call in when we are open (or phone if you want to be really sure). Everything we do is free!
